Work Ethic: What You Can Expect

On a Business Level - Reporting

Based on my experience, as Creative Director / Art Director / Production Manager. I report directly to the company CEO.

The person who pays my salary.

As a freelancer, I report only to the Creative or Art Director. The person who contracts me.

I do not report to, or through: Assistants, Co-Creatives, Secretaries, Receptionists or any other go-betweens.

Given that they will have no idea of what I am actually discussing with them. Nor do they pay me.

On a Personal Level

I have a very high energy level and direct my skills of people motivation, to management discipline and delivery on realistic deadlines.

In every organisation I have worked for, I have brought a positive, enthusiastic and highly energized creative influence to the process.

My off-beat sense of humour is of great help in dealing with people.

Especially in the often ego-fragile and over-pressurised environment of the creative/ad-industry.

In return I demand a high degree of integrity from Management, a clear brief and path of intent, and a straight forward, non-egotistic, situation-resilient management team, to fulfil my pursuit of perfection and profit.
